

1. File and Folder Naming

- All files and folders are named correctly, consistently, and descriptively.
- Most files and folders are named correctly and descriptively.
- Some files and folders are named incorrectly or lack clarity.
- Many files and folders are inaccurately named.

2. Site Structure

- The site structure is well-organized with clear folders containing like files.
- The site structure is somewhat organized but lacks consistency.
- Some organization is present, but the site structure is confusing.
- The site structure is disorganized and hinders navigation.

3. HTML Coding and Tags

- All HTML files are well constructed with correct tags, no empty tags, and proper tag closure.
- Most HTML files are well constructed with minor issues in tag usage.
- Some HTML files have significant issues with tag usage and structure.
- HTML files are poorly constructed with many tag-related problems.

4. Indentation and Code Quality

- All HTML, CSS, and JavaScript code is well indented, easy to read, and error-free.
- Most code is well indented and readable, with minor formatting issues.
- Some code lacks proper indentation and is challenging to read.
- Code is poorly indented, making it difficult to understand.

5. External CSS

- Only external CSS files are used for styling, and no internal or inline CSS is present.
- External CSS is predominantly used, with a few instances of internal or inline CSS.
- Some internal or inline CSS is used within the HTML document.
- Extensive internal or inline CSS is present.

6. Home Page

- The home page is correctly created with the appropriate name (e.g., "index.html").
- The home page exists but has a minor naming issue.
- The home page is missing or incorrectly named.
- The home page is missing or has significant naming issues.

7. Originality

- The work is original and not copied or edited from instructor's work or classmates' work.
- Some elements show similarities with instructor's or classmates' work but are mostly original.
- A significant portion of the work appears to be copied or heavily edited from others.

8. Links and paths

- All links to related files use proper paths and work as expected.
- Most links function correctly, with minor issues.
- Some links are broken or don't function as expected.
- Many links are broken or non-functional.